Traditional Chinese Medicine

The Fundamental philosophy behind Traditional Chinese Medicine is to help restore health and balance for the tire body. Traditional Chinese Medicine has been revered in China for over 5,000 years as an ancient powerful healing system. Chinese herbs are designed to help strengthen, build and replenish the vital life force of Qi in order to promote balance and harmony in the body.

- Yin and Yang represent the opposite but complementary forces that exist throughout the universe.
- Qi is the dynamic energy force in all phenomena and contains the essence of both Yin and Yang.
- Establishing a healthy balance of Yin and Yang and maintaining a healthy flow of Qi governs the Traditional Chinese Medicine healing process.

Homeopathy is safe and gentle and assists in the natural tendency of body to heal itself.

The Basic principle of homeopathy was developed in Germany by Dr. Samuel Hahnemann, in 1796. His extraordinary discovery revealed the “law of similars” or that “like treats like”. Hahnemann called this unique medical system “homeopathy” from Greek words “homios” fro similar and “pathos” for suffering. Homeopathic remedies reflect the primary concept that substances in extremely minute doses actually stimulate the body to heal that which they cause in excess.

Hahnemann found a method of dilution called “potentization” where the substance is diluted and shaken vigorously over and over again, until the mixture contains no molecular trace of original matter. This final minute solution or homeopathic remedy is safe and gentle, yet powerful and effective.

When homeopathy is marked X, it was diluted at the ratio of 1:9 Or 1 part substance to 9 part water. 6X means it was diluted 1:9, 6 times.

Nu-Tinnitus also contains homeopathic remedies that promote relief from tinnitus without side-effects or dependency.*
